THE OLD STORY OF BILL POOLE MURDER RETOLD.

Bis Trouble with John Morrissey-The Fatal Night in Stanwix Hall-Lew Baker's Flight-"I Die a True American"-Living with a Ball in his Heart.

From the New York Dispatch.

The occurrences we are about to describe The occurrences we are about to describe can scarcely be described under any other heading than that of a battle. Four people were seriously injured, one of them afterward dying from the result of his wounds, while no less than nine were engaged in the desperate conflict. In 1855 the bar and lunch room opposite the Metropolitan Hotel was known as Stanwix Hell. It appears to have been at that time a favorite resort of the "fancy," and members of the rough order generally. On the morning of Feb. 24, in that year, two well-known individuals, viz.: William Poole and John Morrissey, afterward member of Congress, met there, and, entering into a discussion about some quarrel they had had previously, got to high words, and eventually drew pistols on each other. Neither dared to fire, however, and the proprietors of the place, Messrs. Dean & Deagle, interfering, both were arrested. Poole was conveyed to the Eighth Ward station house by officer Hogan, but there being no one to prefer a charge against him he was allowed to go at liberty, and at once returned to Stanwix Hall, where he entered into a conversation with some people there relative to the muss, Morrissey, who was in charge of Officer Rue, was liberated by that official on condition that he would promise to appear in court if called upon the following Monday morning. Morrissey afterward meta friend of his named Hyler, who was staning at Stanwix Hall, and who wished him to go back there and sleep with him that night, which, however, he declined doing, fearing a resumption of the quarrel with Poole, and preferring to go home.

SPITTING IN POOLE'S FACK.

At 11:30 A. M. on the 25th Poole was still engaged in conversation at the bar of Stanwix Hall, when a carriage drove up to the door from which, it was alleged, six men alighted. They were Lewis Baker (formerly a policeman), Jams Turner. Patrick McLaughlin (familiarly known as "Paugene." who several years afterward was killed by "Dad" Cunningham), Cornelius Linn, Charles Van Pelt, and John Hyler, already referred to. Poole was leaning on the bar, with his back to it, when McLaughlin took him by the collar and endeavored to induce him to fight. He used very opproprious epithets, and finally spat three times in Poole's face. The latter at once perceived that they were desirous of getting him into a fight, and took no further notice of McLaughlin than by saying "That's fine, isn't it?"

notice of McLaughlin than by saying "That's fine, isn't it?"
Turner pulled McLaughlin away, and Poole, moving to the centre of the room, stood perfectly quiet. Turner then, seeing that their efforts to exasperate Poole had failed, threw his cloak or coat upon the table, and exclaiming, "Let's sail into him, any how," drew a revolver and attempted to shoot him. The ball, however, entered his own left arm, and he fell. It is supposed that while presenting the revolver some one knocked against him, and altered the course of the builet.

Poole then, fully realizing the intentions of the crowd, exclaimed: "For God's sake, don't murder me!"

After Turner fell his conduct was more like that of a madman than a sane being. He kept firing round him, and finally succeeded in shooting Poole in the leg. While Poole was still on the ground, having stumbled on being shot, Baker ran up to him, and placing the muzzle of his revolver against Poole's breast, shouted, "Fli put you out of the way now."

Turner kept firing, and even shot his own friend Baker, inflicting a slight wound on the acalp and another in the thigh. Charles Lozier, who was in the barroom at the time, hastened to the assistance of Poole, and he also was shot in the head and thigh by Turner. The party then hastened to escape from the place, but on gaining the door, it is alleged, again turned and fired at Poole. The latter was found to be shot in the left side right below the heart. He was allowed to remain in Stanwix Hall all night, but in the morning, seeming better than was anticipated, he was conveyed to his home in Christopher street.

THE ESCAPE OF BAKER.

In the mean time, information being conveyed to the police, the Capitain proceeded to the residence of Justice Brennan, in White street, and getting that gentleman to go with him, went to the residence of Johnny Lyng, corner of Canal street and Brendway, where it was expected the gang would be, and without any difficulty found McLaughlin and Turner, but Baker had managed to escape. He was traced to a drug store where he had got his wounds dressed, and Dr. Clark, who had attended him at Johnny Lvug's, was found, but no additional informas to his whereabouts was obtained. On the following Monday morning John Morrissey proceeded to the police court, in pursuance of his promise to offser Rue, and gave himself up. He was held to hall in the sum of $1,000 for assaulting Pools. Hyber also gave himself up, and on the next day Linn was arrested. Van Peit was also subsequently taken, and the only person implicated still at liberty was Lewis Baker.

LIVING TWO WEEKS WITH A BALL IN HIS HEART.

Poole, who had shown every symptom of a nick recovery, suddenly grew worse, and on hursday, March 8, expired. On a surgical ex-minat on being made, a pistol ball was found worselded to but here.

animat on being made, a pistol ball was found smoedded in his heart. The sympathy and indignation excited in the public mind by the murder of Poole was something wonderful, considering the low moral character and surroundings of the deceased during life. Political feeling ran high at the time, and the Order of United Americans and Know-Nothing party were beginning to make their presence felt. The assassination of Poole was looked upon as the act of a party of foreigners, and much ill feeling was in consequence ers. and much ill feeling was in consequence of the friends of the deceased was held in the City Hotel, and a Poole deceased was held in the City Hotel, and a Poole deceased was held in the City Hotel, and a Poole deceased was held in the City Hotel, and a Poole deceased was held in the City Hotel, and a Poole deceased was held in the City Hotel, and a Poole deceased was held in the City Hotel, and a Poole deceased was held in the City Hotel, and a Poole deceased was held in the City Hotel, and a Poole was in the bit in his mouth, for I knew what an honest man he was, and how much—I couldn't tell then exactly how much—for I had lost the run of him—we were indebted to him.

"I DIE A TRUE AMERICAN!"

William Poole was born in Sussex county, N. J., and at the time of his death was aged thirty-three veers and eight months. He had resided in New York city for nearly twenty years, for most of which time he had been engaged in the butcher business in Washington Market. He had also been one of the proprietors of the Bank Exchange Saloon, corner of Broadway and Howard street, but had severed his connection with it some time previously. It was said that while lying ill from his wounds he had declared his intention of living a better lite in the event of his recovery, and had endeavored to point out to his companions the wickedness of the lives they were leading. His last words are said to have been, "I die a true American, any way."

At the meeting in the City Hotel one hundred and ninety-seven names were appended to the resolutions regretting his death, and a few days after the Empire Club of Baltumore city held a meeting at which similar resolutions were passed. The funeral procession numbered upward of four thousand persons, and included members of the Order of United Americans, Know-Nothings, fremen, and other organizations. A touching discourse was delivered over the body by the Rev. J. B. Wakely, of the Jane Street Methodist Church, and at Greenwood Cemetery, where the body was interred, the burial service of the Order of United Americans, Broodway, near Bleecker street, alone, it was estimated that 80,000 people witnessed the procession. stimated that 80,000 people witnessed the ;

The inquest was at once proceeded with, and fasted several days, the ultimate result being a verdict finding that "the death of Wm. Poole was caused by a gunshot wound from a pistol in the hands of Lewis Baker, at Stanwix Hall, in Broadway, on the morning of the 25th of February, 1856." Turner and McLaughlin were declared gulity of aiding and abetting the crime: Hyler, Linn, and Van Pelt, of being accessories: Morrissey guilty of assault with intent to take the life of Poole; and James Irving of being accessory before the act. Morrissey was at first admitted to built in the sum of $10,000, but was subsequently discharged; James Irving, who was also accused of periury. CAPTURE OF LEWIS BAKER.

All sail was crowded on, and after an hour's sail the clipper was within hailing distance of the brig. They boarded the latter and found Baker on the Isabella Jewett. Presenting revolvers at him, he, seeing no means of escape open to him, submitted, and was taken on board the Grapeshot, where a stateroom was arranged for him, and ne was manacled. The captain of the Isabella Jewett offered no objection to Baker's arrest, probably being glad to get rid of such a passenger. The Grapeshot made a good run home, arriving at New York on May 16, and Baker was at once taken to the Tombs. This was the first known instance of the authorities of any city sending a vessel to a foreign country in pursuit of a criminal, and the utmost credit is due Judge Stuart, Mayor Wood, George Law, and all concerned.

HOW BAKER ESCAPED.

Baker's first trial was commenced on Monday. Nov. 26, 1855, and after occupying sixteen days, resulted in the disagreement of the jury, and a consequent miscarriage of justice. A second trial was held at Newburg in November, 1856, and again the jury disagreed. Baker was soon after admitted to ball in the sum of $5,000, and here the case may be said to have ended. Nor was justice properly meted out to any of the others, save in the case of McLaughlin, who was himself afterward murdered. John Morrissey does not appear to have been really privy to the affair, though the participants in it were evidently his friends. HOW BAKER ESCAPED. friends.

It was truly remarked by A. Oakey Hall, then District Attorney, in his opening address at the first trial of Baker, that the occurrences at Stanwix Hall on the evening of Saturday, 24th February, 1855, were more suggestive of life on the borders than in a large city supposed to be under the control of the officers of the law.

pened, in Mr. Lincoln's Own Words.

From the San Francisco Bulletin.

"When I first entered upon mv duties as President," said Mr. Lincoln, grasping our arm in his peculiar way with one of his long, bony hands, while he ran his fingers through and brushed back his shaggy black hair, "I fully made up my mind to appoint to office those only whom I knew to be honest and who had suitable ability. In any event, honesty should be the prerequisite, as the lack of a little ability might be easily made up by an honest man endeavoring to do his whole duty conscientiously. While this resolve was fresh upon me, there came to visit me a very old friend, a Baptist minister, who had travelled so fast that he had not yet shaken the Illinois real estate off his capacious boots.

who had travelled so fast that he had not yet shaken the Illinois real estate off his capacious boots.

"Why, what brings you here, Mr. Shofler? (which was not his name, but it will do just as well.)

"Well.' he replied, 'I came down herer fistly, to see you and get an old-fashioned shake of the hand; and secondly, to say that the folks of my congregation are so poor that they can hardly afford me a decent living, and I thought maybe you could give me some sort of an office that would pay me better."

"Certainly,' I answered quickly, for I knew he was an honest man, and I was looking for stock of that kind. 'Have you in view any particular office?"

"No,' said the Rev. Mr. Shofle, complacently; 'I would not know what to select if you were to hand me a list to choose from."

"Nor I what to give you; but I will tell you who will help you out. You know Col. Chootsper, of your county. He is now on duty in the Treasury Department. Go and see him; he is a man of resources and will get you out of your difficulty. Come back to-morrow and report.

"The next day, according to promise, Shofle 'put in an appearance,' and said that the Colonel had recommended him to apply for a certain position in the Revenue Department.

"What is the saiary? said I, signing in a mechanical way a pile of commissions."

"Two thousand dollars a year."

"Well, do you think that enough? I may be able to do better for you,' for I knew he was an honest man, and thought he might just as well as not get a place where he could earn more money.

"Oh, plenty, uncle Abe, for that is more than double the amount I've been earning for years

"On, plenty, uncir Abe, for that is more than past."

Now I began to think," said our martyr-President, "that I would have to force him into a place paying a larger salary, and where the Government would have a corresponding return for his valuable services; for I was more than ever (if that were possible) convinced that he was an honest man; but I finally concluded to give him his own way, and he was appointed accordingly. Off he went rejoicing, but I felt rather mean at my one-horse gift to my good, honest, reverend friend.

"Three years elapsed, and the anxieties attending the warhad completely driven from my mind for the time being the incident just related, when my messenger brought me a card bearing the familiar name. 'Rev. Adam Shofe,' and immediately there flashed across my mind all the circumstances attending my appointing him to office. I directed him to be shown in, and in walked, with creaky boots, one of the best and finest dressed men I had seen in many a day. I recognized his countenance at a glance, but it was his marvailous clother that troubled me.

by lightning I managed to exclaim. 'Indeed:

"Yes, I feel that there are many others deserving of the place, and that it is my duty to make way for them.'

"Was there ever such an honest man as that?' said I to myself, chuckling over my stupidity on the clothes surprise. 'But,' said I, aloud. 'I'm afraid you are not considering yourself, friend Shofle, and that when you go back to preaching you will be as hard up as when you came here three years ago. 'Hadn't you better hold on a little longer, say a year more, and let us both go out of office together?'

"No, thank you, I am going to Europe during that time, but I hope to see you here, as President, when I return, and after a few more kind expressions, off went the Rev. Shofle.

"About a month after, one of the reverend gentleman's neighbors paid me a visit, and, among other things, remarked casually that I had done a pretty good thing for Shofle. 'Yes,' I replied, 'I gave him a $2,000 a year position for three years.'

"Besides the balance!' added my visitor. 'Why, if he is worth a cent he is worth to-day $200,000, and I can prove it if necessary.'

"What could the idiot mean? To satisfy myself of the falsity of the charge I sent detectives to where he lived, and they brought back word that he had made his $6,000 salary in the aggregate yield fully $200,000; but then I knew he was an honest man, and there must be a mistake somewhere!

"By the way," added Mr. Lincoln, with one of his knowing winks." we have plenty of 'Shofles' left, but, the mischief of it is, it is hard finding them out, and they are not considerate enough to resign, as did our honest friend Shofle."

Gov. John T. Hoffman and family intend spending a portion of the winter at the Ciarendon notel. Wedding Twice Broken Off-The Brother of the Bride Mysteriously Disappears. The family and friends of Mr. Charles W. McDaniels of Canonsburg, Washington county, Pa., are greatly alarmed at his mysterious dis-appearance since Oct. 9. On that day he came this city in company with Mr. D. E. Ewing, salesman in the house of Diggs, Cunningham

Co., 365 Broadway.

Mr. McDaniels, who was a merchant, came to New York to purchase a stock of goods. He was to call at 365 Broadway on the 10th to purchase a portion of his stock. When the train reached Jersey City late on the evening of the 9th Mr. Hotel on some business, stating that he intended to go from thence to the St. Nicholas Hotel, to be present at his sister's wedding. Since then he has not been heard of, and his friends entertain grave fears that he has been foully dealt with. At the time of his disappearance he had on his person $4.500 and a heavy gold watch and chain. He is thus described: Height, 5 feet 8 inches; dark complexion, straight black hair, dark moustache and goatee, large eyes, mole on chin, sear on his thigh. When last seen had on dark brown tweed overcoat, frock coat, pants and vest of dark cassimere, green soft hat, marked Serenade inside. Pe did not register at the St. Nicholas, nor is his hame to be found at any other hotel. Every he pi has been visited, as also have the Morgue. Spitals, and Police Headquarters, but not the intest trace of the missing man could be found.

At first it was thought that he had left the city in search of his sister, who was to be married to a Mr. Ray, a Chicago merchant, at the St. Nicholas, the proposed bridal party having come to the city on Monday, the 7th, but instead of stonping at the St. Nicholas they went to the Fifth Avenue Hotel. A misunderstanding arose between the expectant bride and groom, and the match was broken off.

Several years ago Mr. Ray and Miss McDaniels were engaged to be married, but on account of some misunderstanding the wedding did not take place. They both shortly after married other parties. A year or more and the party were left widow and widower, and their old love reviving they were once more engaged, and, as already stated, came to New York to have the marriage ceremony performed, with the result as above. The widow returned to her home in Pennsylvania, and Mr. Ray went to Chicago and the day of Mr. McDaniels's arrival.

At first it was thought that Mr. McDaniels concluded that the wedding had taken place and the party were en route for Chicago, and the bay of Mr. McDaniels is a young married man, and his wife and mother are crazed over his disapbe present at his sister's wedding. Since then

H. C. Beard, Esq., a farmer, aged about 29 years, and living in Monmouth township, about nine miles from the city, hitched up his team on Monday last and started for Topeka. It was then raining, and he hoisted his umbrella. When about one mile from home he was struck by a hot, sharp, terrible stroke of lightning. He wore a steel truss, and the lightning penetrated his pantaloons and shirt, and took up its line of travels on the circuit round his body. Part of the charge left the truss at his side and passed down his right side into the spring seat, tearing it to pleces and knocking down both his horses. His hip to-day was bruised, and the skin lacerated badly for about a foot in length by three inches in width, and is very sore. The balance of the charge left the truss and climbed up his left side, biazing its way as it went, and part of it forced a passage through his shirt and overcoat at the shoulder, and the balance trailed its way leisurely down his arm, scorching and singing a wide swath as it went, until it struck the umbrella handle, when he at last got rid of his meddlesome visitor. He was benumbed and somewhat paralyzed, but succeeded in reaching home by himself, although he had to be helped out of the wagon.

Mr. Beard gave us a call this morning, and showed us the numerous rents made in his clothes, and also the extent of his injuries. Several gentlemen who heard him tell his story, and saw the amount of injury received by him, were of the unanimous opinion that it was parvellous. The lightning will leave him alone after this.
